

CONNELLVILLE HAS MAN READY TO FINANCE PURCHASE OF WAR DEPARTMENT'S FOOD

Antonio Bufano Has Party
Ready to Put Up the Necessary Money.

UP TO RESIDENTS NOW

Little Trouble Anticipated In Handling Distribution of the Car
If Bought; Price List for Army Surplus Stock Announced.

Connellsville has the opportunity to secure a car of foodstuffs from the War Department. Announcement was made this afternoon by Antonio Bufano that he has a man who will put up the money to pay in advance for the consignment if arrangements can be made to distribute it, the man advancing the money to be reimbursed afterward.

While no one has been approached with this in view it is believed there will be little trouble incurred in providing for distribution. At Mount Pleasant, where James S. Braddock offered the money, the women have taken hold and will use the fire truck for distribution.

It is expected there will be developments next week. Practically every city and town in Western Pennsylvania is arranging for a car or more of government food. A single car would not go far but there may be opportunity for securing additional supplies.

The War Department made public last night a complete list of prices on all subsistence stores available for sale to the public through the parcel post or municipal selling agencies, such as proposed in Connellsville by Mr. Bufano. Costs of commodities to the government have been disregarded, the department said, but the prices will be materially lower than the prevailing market rates. The government is distributing food, in 13 areas so that each may have its share of the 72 articles offered by the public.

The price tables include the price per can or individual units in each case and also the price per case or larger container. It also shows the gross weight per can and per case in order that the public may arrive at the price it has to pay by adding parcel post rates from the nearest distributing point to the home of the consumer to the f. o. b. prices quoted.

Municipal selling agencies will compute freight charges on these shipments to be added by the price quoted by the war department. On the parcels post distribution no orders will be received direct by the war department, but only through the post-office department, which will requisition the supplies by case or larger package, the postmasters in turn breaking these shipments up into unit packages of a single can or several cans.

Sales to municipalities at the new prices will begin as soon as the surplus property officers at the various zone supply offices and depots have received the quotations made public today. Sales to individuals through the parcels post will be inaugurated August 18, and before that time all postmasters will have a price quotation list from which the consumer may order.

The department emphasized that no change in the policy of sales to municipalities had been made, the only alteration being in prices. If a municipality is unable to buy or sell foodstuffs, owing to its charter or local laws, the department will ship it to upon consignment subsistence stores in not less than case or carton lots, the goods to be paid for or returned within 30 days from date of receipt. Shipments of this character, however, will be made only when the mayor or head of the local government either acts as the federal government's agent and supervises the distribution

DAWSON HAS RICH STREAK OF PATRIOTISM, CIVIC PRIDE AND 18-CARAT AMERICANISM

Town of 950 Buys $1,169,200 Worth of Liberty Bonds;
Gives $18,000 to the Red Cross; Fills War Chest
With $8,200 and Does Other Good Work.

Dawson's spirit of sacrifice in the war is described in the following article, written by Rev. E. A. Glennon, pastor of the Sacred Heart Catholic church, during the war a chaplain in the United States Reserve, which is particularly appropriate in connection with the community homecoming celebration at the Dawson fair grounds today:

"Today the peoples of Dawson are tendering a formal welcome to their soldier sons. The Dawson of which we write is not the Dawson of the golden region of the Klondike but the Dawson of Fayette county, Pennsylvania. Just as Dawson, Alaska, possessed untold riches of the yellow metal in its original form, so also we hold Dawson, Pennsylvania, is a rich vein of patriotism, civic pride, and 18-carat Americanism. The 'spirit of sacrifice' manifested in deeds by this

THE HOME EVENING PAPER BEST SERVES WANTS OF READERS

That the home evening paper is better able to serve the wants of readers than the morning Pittsburgh dailies was given further proof yesterday.

In its last edition, The Courier published a complete digest of President Wilson's address to Congress, on plans to reduce the high cost of living, within an hour after its delivery, within the quiet of the evening hour, they sit down and leisurely peruse its columns and become posted upon world events many hours in advance of those who depend upon the morning papers of the next day for their information.

Although only 72 staples are enumerated in the price list, the itemized quotations, owing to the variety of packing, are quite lengthy. Quotations on some of the leading commodities are:

CONGRESS STUDIES PRESIDENT'S PLANS TO CUT LIVING COST

Legislation He Asks For Will Be Passed
Quickly, the General Belief.

By Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—Congress got down today to analyzing and digesting President Wilson's recommendations for the reduction of the increased cost of living.

Members of the Senate and House Interstate Commerce Commission and agriculture committees which will have in hand framing of legislation to extend the food control act and to regulate storage of foodstuffs paid particular attention to the address delivered last yesterday before a joint session of the two houses.

Although neither branch of Congress was in session today both prepared to take action at an early date on the living problems. Although some members disagreed with the specific recommendations of the President it was believed the prospective legislation would follow the proposals be made.

Republican Leader Mondell declared in the House today that Congress was ready to act promptly on such legislation as was needed to carry out the suggestions made yesterday by President Wilson for reducing the cost of living.

PENNSYLVANIA HAS FOUR TIMES AS MANY AUTOS AS IN 1914

Tremendous Increase Shown in the Figures Given Out by State Highway Department.

HARRISBURG, Aug. 9.—The tremendous increase in the number of automobiles in Pennsylvania since August 1, 1914, is shown in a statement issued today by the automobile division of the Pennsylvania State Highway Department. There were over four times as many pneumatic-tired vehicles in Pennsylvania August 1, 1919, as there were August 1, 1914. There were six times as many solid-tired vehicles August 1, 1919, as August 1, 1914.

The statement shows also that 158 dealers in second-hand automobiles have registered with the Governor Sprong signed a law compelling such registration, while affidavits have been filed by 1533 persons relative to the purchase of second-hand vehicles. These vehicles do not by any means represent the number of second-hand dealers in Pennsylvania nor the number of second-hand automobiles which have changed hands since the passage of the law concerning registration. It is estimated by the automobile division that there are 2,000 second-hand dealers in this state. The registrations are increasing, however.

The total receipts from all sources on August 1, for the last six years are proof conclusive of the great increase in the use of automotive vehicles in this state. The receipts August 1, 1914, from all sources were $1,118,716.50. On August 1, 1919, the figure was $4,593,330.

It is estimated that there is one automobile in Pennsylvania for every 20 persons, figuring the population at this time as approximately 5,000,000 people. In 1914 the proportion was one automobile to every 70 persons.

Figures prepared by the automobile division for August 1, of the last six years, show the following:

Pneumatic-tired Vehicles—1914: registrations, 95,031; receipts, $906,585. 1915, 155,782; 1916, 234,965; 1917, 324,432; 1918, 342,357; 1919, 402,797. Total, $3,686,750.

Solid-tired Vehicles—1914: registrations, 5,737; receipts, $73,477.50. 1915, 7,358; 1916, 8,525; 1917, 10,061; 1918, 10,171; 1919, 15,993. Total, $217,712.50. 1915: 27,308; 1916, 27,822.50; 1917, 36,475; 1918, 36,475.

TO FIGHT STRIKE

New York Producing Managers Recruiting Player Actors.

By Associated Press.
NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—Decision to fight the strike called by the Actors' Equity association which Thursday closed 13 of New York's leading theatres, was made by the Producing Managers' association late yesterday.

The day was spent by the managers in frantic efforts to recruit actors and actresses who would sign long non-strike contracts. Many a mediocre player who has met with scant courtesy in managerial offices hitherto suddenly found himself or herself cordially urged over the telephone to come around and talk terms.

Only four of the 12 theatres which closed Thursday night were able to open their doors yesterday. In these cases numerous substitutions in the cast were noted.

Theatres which remained closed were the Astor, Broadhurst, Gaity, Knickerbocker, Lyric, Playhouse, Princess, Republic and Shubert. At the Coburn & Harris theatre, George M. Cohan, producer, and Sam Forest, general stage director, were forced themselves to fill in gaps. At the Forty-fourth street theatre, where the "Gaieties of 1919" was billed, a variety program was substituted.

SEEKS TO HAVE RANK OF CAPTAIN CONFERRED ON LIEUTENANT JOHN WRIGHT

Attached to the new Army bill as a rider is a bill introduced by Congressman Thomas S. Crago of Waynesburg providing that the rank of captain, retired, be conferred upon Lieutenant John E. Wright, a Fayette county officer severely wounded and permanently disabled at the battle of Chateau Thierry July 14, 1918, in recognition of the fact that the lieutenant at the time was performing the duties of a captain, "he having command of a unit greater than the unit corresponding with his rank" and "by reason of the serious wound he received in this engagement (Chateau Thierry) in the line of duty."

The bill provides that Lieutenant Wright be promoted to the rank of captain and that he be given a commission and pay of a retired officer. Wright was a second lieutenant at the time he was wounded. The bill speaks of his "conspicuous services."

Lieutenant Wright was attached to the Third Trench Mortar Battery, a Third Division (Regular) unit. He was struck in the chest by machine gun fire, a bullet passing so close to his heart that it was "stinged" in the words of the surgeon. He lay on the battle field for hours and was in a hospital for many months before he ing invalided to his home at Prittsburg, near Scottsdale. He has not yet recovered from the effects of the wound.

Since his discharge from the hospital Lieutenant Wright has been attached to the staff of the chief of field artillery in Washington. He has now been assigned by President Wilson to the position of instructor in military science and tactics at the Colorado state college at Fort Collins, Colo., and is preparing to go there to enter upon his new duties.

Lieutenant Wright was in Connellsville yesterday greeting old friends. The lieutenant attended school here and was graduated from the local high school. Following this he entered the naval academy at Annapolis and early in the war was assigned to duty in the Army as a second lieutenant. He is a son of Mr. and Mrs. David Wright of Prittsburg.

Accompanying Lieutenant Wright to Colorado will be his sister, Miss Pearl, who will take up domestic science. Her parents are planning to leave in a few weeks for Elkhart, Ind., to spend the winter with their son, Homer C. Wright, formerly a ward principal in the Connellsville schools.

SECRET SERVICE MEN WILL DROP EVERYTHING ELSE TO HUNT FOR FOOD PROFITEERS

Agents to Be Placed at Disposal of District Attorneys
Throughout County.

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—All special agents of the Department of Justice over the country have been ordered to assist district attorneys in uncovering evidence of profiteering in food stuffs and other necessities.

Attorney General Palmer's instructions were that the special agents should drop everything but the most pressing cases now pending and devote their entire attention to assisting in the campaign to reduce the cost of living. The results will be to put hundreds of trained investigators in the search for men who have inflated prices exorbitantly.

While it was not so stated, the impression was gained that nothing but the investigation of radical propaganda which resulted in recent bomb outrages would be allowed to interfere with the efforts to punish profiteering. Reports received at the department from district attorneys indicated that much evidence against profiteers was being accumulated. Prosecutions are expected to result soon in a number of districts.

30 FARMERS CHARGED WITH PROFITEERING IN PITTSBURGH

PITTSBURGH, Aug. 9.—In a drive to stop profiteering among the farmers who sell foodstuffs in this city at abnormal prices and do not properly mark measures as required by state law, Murray Livingston, city ordinance officer, today arrested 30 farmers charging them with misdemeanor.

The arrests were made at markets in different parts of the city. The defendants will be arraigned before a police magistrate this afternoon.

MURDER MYSTERY

Half Burned Body of Young Man
Found in a Coke Oven.

A murder mystery that may never be solved was revealed in the discovery of the charred body of a young man in a coke oven at Lehigh, near Uniontown, this morning. A scar on the left foot suggests that the victim might have been a wounded soldier.

"The body was found pitched head first in the oven, with head and arms burned off. Underclothing of good quality was worn by the victim, whose feet were bare and clean, leading to the theory that he was carried there probably after being slain. Two strange men seen in the vicinity of the ovens last night are suspected of knowing something about the affair."

The remains were brought to Uniontown to await possible identification.

Some Guards Withdrawn.

CHICAGO, Aug. 9.—Five hundred policemen, 50 deputy sheriffs and the last of the state troops assigned to race riot duty were withdrawn from the stockyards today in the hope that the striking employees of the packers might be induced to return to work. About 1,000 policemen and 100 deputy sheriffs are still on duty in the vicinity of the stockyards.

$400 IN FINES IS IMPOSED ON EIGHT CAUGHT IN A RAID

Failing to Pay, Five Men and Three Women May Go to Jail for 30 Days.

Fines aggregating $400 were imposed in police court this morning on eight inmates of an alleged disorderly house at 401 Baldwin avenue, raided last evening shortly after 7 o'clock by Chief of Police W. B. Bowers and Patrolman D. H. Turner, with 30-day jail sentences as alternatives. All the inmates were negroes with the exception of one, a woman from Vanderbilt, who said her name was Phyllis Morgan. After the place had been raided and the inmates locked up at the police station the discovery was made that several were supplied with "dope." At the hearing, however, all denied having received the stuff at the resort. The place was not searched for drugs, the only complaint received having been on disorderly conduct.

William Rogers, alleged proprietor of the place, fared no worse in punishment than the others. Acting Mayor Hoover fined him $50 and he set out soon afterwards to get the money. The same penalty was imposed on each of the remainder. The other prisoners gave the names as Walter Belcher and Harry Smith, Altoona; Tom Smith, Sarah Jaynes and Tricie Jackson, Connellsville, and Emma White, Uniontown.

HISTORIC SPOT

Dunbar Picnickers Knap Where Betty
Knox Used to Carry Meal.

Dunbar boasts of one of the prettiest and most historic picnic grounds in this section. It is in Tucker valley, opposite the famous "Betty Knox path," where during the Revolutionary war, Betty Knox used to ride her oxen carrying grain up the path that now bears her name.

Up the mountain to Irishtown, Betty used to go, add down the opposite slope to the little grist mill that then stood on the old mill lot on Christopher Gist's farm, near Ferguson. In the evening she would return bearing the precious meal with her to sustain her family and husband, who had deserted from the British army and hidden themselves near Greenbrier as a way of capture. There, with the help of a energetic Betty, the husband cleared off a little farm and lived there until the United States government was established, whereupon he became one of the leading citizens of that region.

Not many of the picnickers know of the historic memories that surround the spot where they romp and play, but knowledge of them should not decrease its popularity.

P. R. R. BLOCKED

Four Tracks on Middle Division Tied Up By Wreck.

By Associated Press.

HUNTINGDON, Pa., Aug. 9.—Traffic on the middle division of the Pennsylvania railroad was completely blocked early today by the wrecking of an eastbound coal train at Petersburg, seven miles west of here, whereby the debris of 25 loaded cars were scattered over all the tracks.

The wreck occurred at 4:20 A. M. due, it is believed, to the breaking of a car axle. Long lines of passenger trains from the East waited here for the clearing of the tracks. Passengers were taken to Petersburg for transfer around the wreck.

SIDEWALK BLOTCHES, NOW SO NUMEROUS, THE CHEWING GUM CUDS OF BYGONE DAYS

Latented Out by Many Passing Feet They Now Permanently Adorn the Cement Pavements; Parking of Gum Under Tables and Seats Dying Out.

Where is the chewing gum of yesterday? What's become of the juicy cuds that were chewed last week? Abe Martin might ask that question and wait for an answer in vain. An observant city man, however, has discovered where the delectable mouthfuls go in Connellsville—on the sidewalk. It's a fact. If you glance down on the concrete walks you will find countless irregular black patches marring the otherwise clear surface. You've seen 'em often but you never bothered your head about what they were. They were just spots.

Their history is a throwed cud on the walk, a flapping-out by some passerby, who subequently cusses to find a portion of the gum on his shoe, and then more "latching-outs" by more passerby until they become a part of the walk to which they have gradually become so attached. They show up all the more plainly when a rain cleans off the pavement a little. Of course there are still cuds to be found under the tables in the ice cream parlors and beneath the seats at the movie theatres but not in such great quantities. Parking a wad of gum under the table has lost in popularity. Several prominent residents checked speckin' gum and got speckin' back, whereupon they were much chagrined.

And speaking of chewing gum, a certain imaginative city man still mourns the fact that he didn't market a rock-and-rye chewing gum around about July 1. He figures that by judicious and rather insidious advertising he might have conveyed the impression that there was a jag tied up in every package and at the same time kept within the three-quarters per cent alcoholic content limit.

NEIGHBORS FIRE ON MAN ROBBING HIS OWN CELLAR

Pinnacle Resident and Two Assistants Flee When Bullets
Begin Flying.

"THEY'VE GOT ME, PARD"

Shouts One of Trio as He Jumps
Over Hedge Fence But He Later
Finds Out It Isn't So; Situation
Is Explained and All Is Rosy.

In the wee small hours of this morning, a well known city resident who is said to have a well-stocked cellar, took a truck and two helpers up to the Pinnacle to transfer some liquor from his home to a barrel of place in town. They had a barrel of the precious stuff on the truck and were bringing out another, when neighbors, suspecting that there was burglary going on, started firing on them with revolvers.

Following the fusillade of shots, the trio fled. One plunged over a hedge fence into the yard of a neighbor and fell to the ground, shouting: "They've got me, pard; they've got me," after the manner of real burglars. Later he discovered that they hadn't got him after all, judging from the way he jumped up and ran down an adjacent alley.

Aroused by the shots, other residents saw the fleeing men and called the police. An officer who responded, it is said, arrested two men and brought them down to where the excited folks were gathering in their nightclothes. The situation was explained and the men were released.

The owner of the liquor, it is reported, came down town, the most scared individual that was seen around for a long time. Later, so the story goes, he went back up and rescued his liquor, conveying it to its destination. That he had good reason to be frightened is evidenced by the fact that one woman and her son emptied the contents of two revolvers at the marauders.

The excitement took place about 1:15 A. M. The participants being so well known, it provided fine material for the gossip.

It is a question whether it is illegal for a man to move his private stock of liquor from one place to another, but the owner took no chances. At least, he thought he took none until he heard what seemed like a machine-gun snarl open up from a second story window.

DOROTHY PHILLIPS
in "THE HEART OF HUMANITY"
at the THEATRE

THE SOISSON.

"DESTINY"—Dorothy Phillips' first picture since "The Heart of Humanity" will be presented Monday and Tuesday. The picture is a compelling study of present-day life. Its characters are human. Its motives are simple and elemental. It rises to a climax of great power, and it is needless to say the acting of the star is excellent. Moreover, it has a superb cast in her support. The picture tells of the conflict in the Burton family. Hamilton Burton, a son, is filled with ambition. He longs to conquer, to achieve wealth and power. Mary, his sister, counsels that they remain on the farm and make sure of the happiness that is already theirs, rather than reach out for more ambitious things. After the fashion of a number of recent stage successes, "Destiny" shows the results that would follow both choices. The one conclusion is tragic, the other happy. So one may take with him from the theatre whichever he chooses. The cast is noteworthy. William Stowell, who appeared to such advantage in "The Heart of Humanity," is seen in the role of Hamilton Burton, while Harry Hillard, the former Fox star, is seen as the sweetheart of Mary.

THE SOISSON.

"THE ROAD CALLED STRAIGHT"—Featuring Louis Bannion, the Goldenway star, is an interesting feature today. There is just enough story, plenty of easily understood humor, good love interest and a lively settlement between the hero and the villain, in which an ice boat and a deep snowdrift take part. The picture is clean, well put together and excellently acted. Mr. Bannion, as Al Boyd, the young chap who comes out of the west to carry off the eastern beauty, has an easy task in convincing the spectator he is the genuine article. His personality makes his road to the heart of the public a straight one, and his acting commands universal respect. He portrays the role of a wealthy young cattle owner who falls in love with the daughter of a Robert Swiftmore, head of a packers' trust, when the eastern magnate comes to treat with Boyd at his ranch and brings Betty with him. The girl is already engaged to Harrison Stevens, one of her own social set. To save her parents Betty consents to break off her engagement with Stevens and telegraphs Boyd that she has reconsidered her refusal. Al invests in what he imagines stylish clothes and hurries off east. The marriage follows and after a loveless honeymoon the couple return to Betty's home. Later Mrs. Boyd learns the true character of her husband and learns to love him. Supporting the star are Ormi Hawley, Henry Morimer and others.

THE PARAMOUNT.

"CALIBRE 55"—A powerful drama, starring Mitchell Lewis and other prominent screen players, is being presented today. The story centers around Austin Brandt, a rising young Montana cattleman, who was engaged to marry Rosemary, belle of the countryside. A dashing young man of the world appeared and Rosemary, fascinated, eloped with him. The girl left a note for Brandt, explaining her inability to resist. Twenty years elapse. Greer meets financial reverses. He turned up with Rosemary, now a saddened woman, in Custer City. Greer conducted a saloon and dance hall. It was not a notorious one. An unfortunate young girl named Myrtle, one of Greer's cronies is determined to possess Myrtle. With Austin Brandt, six miles from Custer City, lives Joan Brandt, his niece, a beautiful woman. Joan remains aloof from the women of the neighborhood. Robert Barton, a capitalist, having had a financial misunderstanding with Brandt, writes that he is making the trip west to fix up matters. He arrives with his son, Ford Barton, a handsome young fellow. He falls in love with Joan and marries her. Hedda Nova appears in the role of Joan and Victor Sutherland in that of Ford Barton. A selected comedy is also being shown. Monday Emmy Whelan, the delightful Metro star, will be featured in "Fools and Their Money."

Congress Increases Amount for Disabled Men's Vocational Training.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—Recent legislation in Congress has increased the appropriation for the vocational rehabilitation of the disabled soldiers, sailors and marines to the sum of $14,000,000. This work is under the charge of the federal board for vocational education. The allowances made to the men during the period of training has also been changed. Instead of $65 a month a single man without dependents now receives $80, and a man with dependents, in place of the $75 he formerly received, is now paid $100 plus the sum allowed as family allowances.

It is interesting to note in connection with this appropriation of $14,000,000 made recently by congress for the establishment in civil life of disabled ex-service men, that Canada last year gave $32,368,000 for a similar restoration of injured members of the Canadian expeditionary forces. More than two dollars for every one given by the United States is Canada's estimate of the need. Considering the difference in our populations and our resources our northern neighbor deserves our admiration.

Wouldn't Be Any Rose or Hay Fever if Simple Home Remedy Was Given a Chance.
"Yes, there's a real NINETY-NINE per cent effective remedy for hay or rose fever," frankly states a druggist in a prosperous Kentucky city. "But I don't expect anyone to believe me, because the treatment is so easy and the cost not worth mentioning."

"The annual crop of hay-fever jokers would be mighty scarce if people would get an ounce of Mentholized Arlene and by just adding water that has been boiled make a pint of liquid that will prove a real help to all who suffer."

"Many of my hay-fever friends tell me that by starting to gargle and sniff or spray the nostrils a few times a day the expected severe attack often fails to appear and in cases where it does show up is very mild and does not annoy."

"The Better Class of Pharmacists" who dispense Mentholized Arlene say it will greatly modify any attack even when taken three or four days after hostilities begin."

COLUMN OF NOTES OF INTEREST FROM OLD DUNBAR TOWN

Expect to Send Big Representation to West Penn Picnics Next Week.

THE MCCLAIN PROPERTY IS SOLD

Mr. and Mrs. David A. Ketter of Clinton Bay It and Plan Extensive Improvements; Mr. McClain May Move to West Virginia; Notes.

Special to The Courier.

DUNBAR, Aug. 9.—Dunbar and Pechin will be largely represented at the annual West Penn picnics next week, for in addition to the large number of Dunbarians employed with the company, are the friends of the employees are privileged to invite. It will require a special car for Dunbar both picnic days to carry the company's guests to the enjoyments and other good things Oakford holds in store for the pleasure of the picnicers.

Historic Picnic Grounds.
In spite of the discouraging weather of Wednesday and the gloomy effect it had on the members, Thursday proved an ideal picnic day for the Presbyterian Sunday school, and their picnic was a grand success. Superintendent L. S. Kerchner of the American Manganese Manufacturing company gallantly furnished cars to haul the crowd over the New Haven & Dunbar railroad to Deerlick, the present mountain terminal of that road, and it was only an invigorating walk from that point past the furnace reservoirs to Tucker valley, opposite the famous "Betty Knox" path, where the picnic was held.

Vandals Destroy Well.
It is strange what lack of foresight some communities possess. During his long residence at the old Ketter homestead at Ketter station, L. E. Ketter had sunk, through almost solid rock, a well whose waters were famed for their excellence. When the property was sold to Samuel Dixon the well still remained and its usefulness continued. But the furnace company sold the house and it was torn down and removed. In the well was a good pump, and it was left for the accommodation of the thirsty public. But the vandals could not be satisfied. They first broke the pump. Then they tore away part of the platform, exposing the water. Heavy brush was placed thereon as a precautionary measure. Next the vandals tore away the rest of the platform and with it the brush obstructions, and then complaint was made to the Manganese company that the open well was dangerous to travel, although it was not on a public road but 50 yards away, on private property. In response to the complaint and in the interest of "Safety First," that company sent a team over and filled the well up so its waters are no more accessible to the public and its usefulness is destroyed forever.

Bay McClain Property.

Mr. and Mrs. David A. Ketter of Clinton came to Dunbar Tuesday and purchased the J. W. McClain property on the Ferguson road between Ketter and Pechin. They will remodel the house, adding porches, kitchen, bath and sunroom. This property is splendidly located for a fine country home, and they propose to make it such with city conveniences added, such as water, electricity, etc. The price was not made public. Both Mr. and Mrs. Ketter were former Dunbarians and their many friends are glad to welcome them back again. The Connelville Construction company will do the work. Mr. McClain, the present occupant, will likely move to Point Marion or the coal fields of West Virginia, he being a practical miner and a safe and proficient fireboss.

Notes.

Herbert Baker has moved from Pechin to Church hill and occupies the house formerly occupied by M. W. Miller, who has secured rooms for his family in the McDowell mansion at Franklin, and moved therein.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Baker are the proud parents of a bouncing baby boy, their first.

The Gaddis Adult Bible class will hold its regular monthly business and social meeting in the class room at the M. E. church next Tuesday evening, August 12.

Rev. H. L. Humber, having returned from his vacation religious services will be held in the M. E. church Sunday.

J. B. Senor's new Hudson super-six, ordered some six weeks ago, arrived this week and he and his family are enjoying it. It is a beauty, the company's latest product.

Frank McLaughlin of Dunbar township No. 5, was here on business Tuesday. Mr. McLaughlin is a candidate for road supervisor on the Democratic ticket.

Quite a number of persons from Pechin and Dunbar attended the Matthews family reunion Thursday. They report having had a big feast and a good time.

Mrs. Clarence Rout of Pittsburgh came up Saturday and is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Franks of Ferguson road. She will likely remain for several weeks. During her stay she, accompanied by her mother, has been making side visits to relatives in Uniontown and Scottsdale.

Mrs. Rout was formerly Miss Birdie Franks, one of the deservedly popular girls of the Ferguson district.

Jacob Smiley, who for several years has been engaged in sawmill work at the bluestone quarries up Dunbar creek, has moved to the West Virginia coal region where he is doing well.

Miss Rose McClain of Uniontown is visiting Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Carr of Ketter.

Miss Thelma Carr of Ketter was calling on Mount Braddock friends Wednesday.

John Sailor of Greenbrier was thinks the late rains insure heavy corn and potato crops in all the mountain section.

Joseph P. Hughes, the well known farmer and Civil War veteran of Tucker Run was in Dunbar and Connelville yesterday on business.

Mrs. Sarah J. Highland and her daughter, Mrs. Wash Provance and children of Ferguson, were visitors at the Matthews reunion Thursday.

Mrs. Frances Welmer of Ferguson is building herself a new home on the lot in the Feather addition she purchased last year. The house is a frame, with basement cellar. Joseph Woolford of Mount Braddock is doing the work. He expects to have the house ready for occupancy by October.

The township road truck had the gear accidentally broken Tuesday, temporarily crippling the work on the improved road. Wagons will be used until the truck can be repaired, which it is hoped will not be later than the first of the week.

THE HOME SECTOR

Soldier-Editors Will Launch Weekly for "The New Civilian."

The former editorial council of The Stars and Stripes, official newspaper of the American Expeditionary Forces, which suspended publication in June with the disbanding of the A. E. F., has returned to America and will conduct a new weekly magazine for the discharged soldier and sailor to be known as The Home Sector. The council includes six former soldiers—five privates and a sergeant—who went to France in 1917 and were detailed to work on the A. E. F. newspaper in the month of its founding, February, 1918.

The Home Sector will be published at Spring and Macdougall Streets, New York. Its editors plan to make an equal appeal to the men who served in France, the men who served at home, and the men who were in the Navy.

A service department and information bureau will be maintained by The Home Sector which will answer questions on war-risk insurance, allotments, Liberty Loan bonds and the many kindred subjects about which uncertainty and misunderstanding are now general among former service men. Questions will also be answered on general orders and on State and national legislation affecting the former soldier or sailor, as well as on military and naval regulations, history of the war, work of individual units and the like.

Sector, in soldier slang, did not necessarily mean a definite stretch of the battle-front. Paris, for instance, might be referred to as a "fast sector," the leave areas as "rest sectors," Tours, with all its headquarters etiquette and irksome regulations, as a "dirty sector," the bustling docks of Brét or Bordeaux as "busy sectors." The "Home Sector," therefore, means simply the homeland, the United States.

The following policy is outlined by the editors:

"The Home Sector will aim to be independent, outspoken, and always constructive. It expects to be frank, sunny, hopeful, optimistic and inspirational. It will have a lively interest in the welfare of the discharged service men, in what his Government, his State, and his town are doing for him, in what he is doing for his town, his State, his Government and himself—in all plans and movements in which the soldier and sailor, turned civilian, is intimately concerned. It will assume that the four and a half million former service men in America are neither highbrow nor lowbrow, that they, as the heirs of the Republic, are the men upon whom the responsibilities of national and world citizenship are descending. It will impress upon the former service man the fact that not because he was a soldier, but because he is a citizen, the destinies of the greater America must inevitably rest upon him."

CROPS FALL OFF

New Estimates on Corn and Wheat Show Decrease.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—The country's corn crop showed a decrease of 27,052,000 bushels as a result of weather and other conditions during July. The Department of Agriculture in its August forecast announced the crop promised 2,785,378,000 bushels based on conditions existing August 1, compared with 2,815,430,000 bushels made early in July.

Wheat production fell off 231,000 bushels as compared with the July forecast, the total being placed at 1,161,000,000 bushels. There was a decrease of 124,000,000 bushels of winter wheat and 97,000,000 bushels of spring wheat.

BAGDAD DANCING GIRLS ARE NOT A BIT NAUGHTY

There are few cities as wonderful as Bagdad at night, as you sit on the veranda of the club sipping the first peg of the day. After a strenuous hour's tennis your senses are lulled by the magic swirl of the Tigris as it flows swiftly on its 700-mile journey to the sea; lights twinkle on the right bank, appearing among the palms, and the Arab laborers return home from their day's work, compulsorily armed with lanterns.

Your eyes are attracted by a brilliantly lighted house at the far end of the old Turkish bridge of boats, according to the London Times. Apparently the roof is crowded, and white figures seem to dart hither and thither on a tiny stage; occasionally you hear a strange melody come across the water by a vagrant breeze, like the crooning of a child, rising and falling to the notes of some stringed instrument. From afar it is typical of all that is eastern, and strikes a romantic chord. You feel inclined to investigate this strange place, and to see if romance is to be found in an Arab theatre.

On the other bank the inevitable small brown boy appears, comely but unimportant, with his eager cry of "dancing girls, sah!—ver' good." You pass through a lighted street, lined with native cafes, and you stumble up a rickety staircase, feeling that romance must be waiting at the top, and buy an officer's ticket for the apparently reasonable sum of one rupee.

Curious eyes are turned on you as you enter the roofless hall, open to the velvet sky; a native, clad in an odoriferous burnous, shows you to a wooden bench in the front row occupied by a few self-conscious British subalterns. The stage is apparently built of old biscuit tins—which has now to be strictly accounted for by army units—and the curtain, a dirty sheet crudely daubed with paint, is down. Attendees are busily selling tiny cups of coffee and clay pots filled with iced water; there is little noise—only a confused murmuring, strangely melodious.

Suddenly the curtain rises jerkily to disclose four dirty Armenian men, wearing soiled ducks and foxes perched at a jaunty angle on their heads, and strutting on instruments like bloated guttars; the audience remains unmoved by this spectacle, and conversation continues as before.

Superintendent Benton Boyd of the Trotter plant is deeply interested in the whole town out and is anxious that Connelville fans see it in action. QUESTION ARISES AS TO MOST POPULAR FORM OF THROWING WITH INFELDERS Infelders Who Have Their Own Peculiar Way of Throwing.

What is the better form in baseball, to throw underhand, side arm or overhand? We will not venture an opinion. We leave that to the pundits of the pastime—and to the golf players, writes Tom Rice in Brooklyn Eagle.

In their recent series with the Boston Braves, the Brooklyn Superbas had to face the shortstop work of Maranville. We will venture the opinion that Maranville is the best thrower we have ever seen. In that we are supported by the Brooklyn papers, Larry Cheney remarked that Maranville could shoot a ball faster and with more accuracy than any other athlete he knew. Larry was right.

Maranville is a puzzle. He seems to use the ball without making half of the usual motions. He can shoot under or overhanded, but his best trick is in shooting from a sort of side-arm overhand. That is not a clear description, but it is not our fault. Maranville's throw has always been a puzzle, even to players on the field with him. He seems to push, rather than throw, the ball. Another peculiarity is that the players on the same team say he has a "light" throw. That is, it hits the receiver's hands without jarring them. Why that should be so is one of the mysteries of baseball. It is notorious in the profession that a throw from some players will nearly knock the receiver down, even when the thrower then the Connellsville veteran, but John McGraw would hardly consider passing Fletcher along in exchange for any of them.

Injuries sustained on the eve of the opening of the championship season slowed Fletcher up in the first few days of play and finally forced him to fall out of line and allow Eddie Sickling and Al Baird to take turns at plugging the gap between second and third bases. It took him to remain on the bench, however, and he missed only six games. He was not in the best of shape when he reported for duty after his brief lay-off, and even now his back, wrenched in an exhibition game in mid-April, bothers him when he makes an unusually strenuous play, yet his physical condition is only faintly reflected in his work.

Since resuming his place in the line-up Fletcher has peppered the pellet at a .263 clip. This average is not a particularly remarkable one, yet when the details of his batting are scanned it will be found that his hits have been of a most timely nature.

If Fletcher's batting has been of a timely nature his fielding has been doubly so. Of course he has booted a few grounders, but at critical moments, when the blocking of a hard-hit ball has meant the checking of an incipient rally by the opposing club, he has not been found wanting.

UMPIRE O'DAY RANKLES REDS

Squelches Cincinnati Players on Bench When They Question Some of His Decisions.

Those who set out to kid Hank O'Day take upon themselves a man's job. For the veteran umpire always remains a firm grasp on his coat and usually is able to silence his critics with a few well-chosen words. At one stage of a recent game at the Polo grounds the players on the Cincinnati bench began to cast aspersions on Hank's judgment of strikes and balls, but they were stopped short. Holding up the game for an instant, O'Day turned to the Reds' dugout and said, with just a tinge of sarcasm in his voice: "If you guys can call 'em any better than I can come out here and try it. It seems to me that if your eyesight was as good as you seem to think, you'd be in the game with the regular players instead of sitting on the bench."

Whereat silence hung like a pall over the visitors' rendezvous.

PLANS OF FATTY ARBUCKLE

President of Vernon Team to Use Players in Baseball Picture—Has Good Talent.

President Fatty Arbuckle of the Vernon club is going to use his players for something else besides stunts on the diamond. He is framing up a feature baseball picture, in which the Vernon players are to be assigned roles. Arbuckle says there is a lot of good movie talent on his Tiger team, but that they are just built to coast them into the picture.

New York is making a real threat for the pennant now and there is a reason for the Yankees' success.

BASEBALL STORIES

Pitcher Turkey Roman is out of the army at last and rejoined the Little Rock Travelers the other day.

Ellis Johnson, former pitcher for the Philadelphia Athletics, recently out of the army, joined Baltimore.

Before the Chicago Cubs got Lee Magee from Brooklyn, Manager Mitchell tried to deal for John Rawlings of the Braves.

Memphis announced the release of Catcher Gil Meyers, but changed its mind and the young collegian was told he could stay on.

Rube Marquard is not coming on so well with his broken leg and it is doubtful that he will pitch another game this season.

Jack Dunn says that his best bet of several seasons in the way of funds is Boler, the youngster playing shortstop for the Orioles.

Sothoron is pitching the game of his career. His control is perfect and he seldom gives a good hitter a good ball unless he is forced to do so.

There is another new Johnson in the pitching arena. He has joined the Columbus team. His identity is not quite clear, as he is described as "a youngster just returned from France."

Walter Galtin has succeeded Soldier Brown as first baseman for the Mobile team. Galtin seems to have suffered no ill effects from his long service in the north of Russia.

Kid Gleason is quoted as praising Dick Kerr with qualifications. The Kid says Kerr has everything but height, but he is three inches shy of what a real, honest-to-goodness pitcher should be.

FAMOUS NAMES

There are quite a few famous names in the National league pitching ranks this year. Grover Cleveland Alexander and John Calhoun Benton have been famous around the league for some time. But now the Cubs have a splendid running mate to Alexander in Abraham Lincoln Bledsoe. Fred Mitchell, the Cub manager, started to call Bailey "Abe" on the training trip, when the rookie interrupted him and said: "The folks back home all call me 'Abe' for short." And Mitchell wouldn't quarrel about a little thing like names.

VETERAN CRAVATH IS BRAINY BALL PLAYER

Newly Appointed Manager is Oldest Man on Team.

Doing Better Work for Phillies This Season Than for Several Years—Batting Pacemaker of National League.

The one real, outstanding platoon-plated star of the Phils is the oldest player on the team's pay roll, namely, the well-known and dangerous Clifford Carlton Cravath, who has just been appointed manager of the club, succeeding Jack Coombs. Mr. Cravath hit the thirty-seven-year mark on March 23 last. Hitting the thirty-seven mark is the worst thing Gaby has done in his life. He hits the ball much harder.

The only active player now in baseball who is older than Cravath is Dode Faskert of the Cubs. Faskert will be thirty-eight years old next August.

Cravath, on the road to thirty-eight years of age, is the wonder of baseball.

Clifford Carlton Cravath.

Today finds him the batting pacemaker of one of the major leagues. He is playing better ball this year than he has done in the last three or four seasons.

A common estimate of Cravath is that he is a slow-thinking, slow-moving, slow-deciding, good-natured chap who pounds out base hits by sheer might. If it is the common analysis it is the wrong one. Cravath is probably the headiest ball player on his team. He is having years after most players pass into retirement, because of brains.

Cravath can divine the intention of an opposing pitcher far better than his younger and more agile pals. He has a pair of sharpshooter eyes and uses them for seeing purposes. When Cravath drives out a smoking hit you can rest assured that he knew what was being served to him and was set for it. There is no hit-or-miss style with him.

He knows how to play for batsmen in right field and plays hits against the wall at the Philadelphia park better than any other right-fielder with the Phils or on an opposing team. Cravath makes his defensive skill all the more valuable by his uncanny throwing. Cravath actually is one of the best throwing outfielders in America. Speaker can't have a ball faster, but even Speaker can't throw with the judgment of Cravath.

SENATE DEBATE NOT CONVINCING

MAN WITH OPEN MIND CANNOT GET FULL LIGHT OF CONVICTION.

COVENANT IS HUGE SUBJECT

Many Go Into Galleries of Senate to Listen to Debate on League of Nations and Come Away Unilluminated—Women Show Interest.

By EDWARD B. CLARK.

Washington.—The senate of the United States these days is literally an international debating society with a national setting. The representatives of a nation are discussing proposed relations with virtually all the other nations on the face of the earth. The senate is an interesting place, but admittedly it is a place where one cannot get the full light of conviction.

The man with an open mind on the subject of the League of Nations who goes into the senate galleries to get the illumination of conviction has his troubles. Within an hour the League of Nations covenant first will be pronounced the world's greatest document, marking the beginning of a new and better order in world's affairs, and then denounced as "a pact which if given the life of law will undermine Americanism, destroy nationalism and bring war and tumult into the world."

Men have come to Washington to listen to the debates of the League of Nations and gone away saying: "We must make up our minds for ourselves." It is a huge subject, this League of Nations, and no one knows it better than those devoted ones who have read it as one United States senator was said to have read the Bible, "from river to river."

When a printed copy of the covenant and the peace pact is read section by section, and an application is had of the multitudinous national interests involved, it is easy enough to understand why criticism should pass concerning the length of time which it took the conference in Paris to reach its decision.

Fail to Get Light.

There are persons who go into the galleries of the senate to listen to the debate and who come away unilluminated, and who because of the tortuous paths of the arguments are willing to leave the following of them to the senators, and to shift the responsibility from their shoulders to those of the men who are entrusted with the business of making decisions to high matters of state.

The galleries of the senate today are interesting places, interesting in part because of the diversified nature of those who attend the daily sessions. Scores upon scores of men and women go to the galleries for one day and leave with the decision not to return. There are scores of others, however, who return day after day to listen to the senators on this side and to the senators on that side, enjoying the debate for the very warmth of it and probably hoping that some day a spark will fly which will supply light sufficient for the gallery student to see his own way clear to an opinion on this world pact.

Perhaps it is the fact that enfranchisement has come to them in no large a degree recently that makes the women journey to the galleries in far greater numbers than the men. It has been noticeable in the senate, and in the house, too, for that matter, in recent months that the women are showing a strong interest in matters of legislation and of government generally.

Wrath Hits Them.

There are in the gallery day by day many men and women whose minds already are made up. They are the ones whose enthusiasms get away from them once in a while, and who by their demonstrations call down upon their heads the wrath of the vice president, or the president pro tempore, whichever happens to be presiding.

It is against the rules of the senate to evidence vocally or by hand clapping or foot-stamping, approval or disapproval of anything which is said on the floor. Once in a while the galleries are cleared by order of the vice president because of these demonstrations.

One of the elements which enters into the senate today to make the situation perplexingly interesting is the fact that among the opponents of the treaty of the League of Nations there is a score or two of reasons for opposition, some of them diametrically opposed to the others. The result of this is one hears 20 different reasons why something should be done, or should not be done, and more than occasionally some of these reasons are at loggerheads with the other reasons, although all are intended to effect the same general purpose.

There are several points of pepper in the senate (dish today, while sugar is noticeable by its absence. Spicy debates are ten times as interesting as sugary debates. Occasionally senators reach beyond the pepper pot for the vinegar bottle. When this happens there is likely to be trouble. Senators have come closer recently to passing by the relict courtesies for the direct than is altogether safe from dignity's standpoint. All of these things, however, add to the general joy of the galleries, for the galleries frequently hold those unregenerate ones who delight in a row.

They're All Alike.

The Dog Fancier.—Don't get scared, m'am. The pup don't mean nothing by it. He always growls like that when he's fed.

The Customer.—That doesn't disturb me. I've been feeding a husband for six years.

Expert Training.

"Did the professor of physiology have any success with the suspect?" "Oh, yes; he made him show his hand."

"What then?" "Then he showed his teeth."

HOT AFTER PETTY GAMBLERS

New York American League Club Making Usual Drive Against Betting at Polo Grounds.

Officials of the New York American league club are making their usual drive against the petty gamblers who infest the main grandstand back of third base and the list of gamblers who find it impossible to get into the Polo grounds when the Yankees are playing is growing as a result, says a New York Evening Sun critic. Since the activity against these bettors was started by Yankee officials many gamblers have been led to the gate, given a refund on their admission and told to keep out. Some have attempted to return, but find themselves barred and must do their small fry wagering over the ticker tape, if at all, when the Yanks are home.

Baseball's hold on the American public is due in the most part to the integrity of the players and the fact that the finger of suspicion cannot be pointed at the result of the games. For this reason it always has been the aim of those identified with the sport to drive out the gambling element. The game is better off without persons of this ilk, and the owners of the Yankees are to be commended on their stand. These gamblers make themselves obnoxious and objectionable not only to the club management but to the other fans who put home loyalty above a paltry dollar or two.

TROTTER WINS

Defeats Mount Braddock Team by a Score of 3 to 1.

Trotter defeated Mount Braddock at Trotter by a score of 3 to 1. Trotter will play Leisnering No. 2 at Trotter on Monday, and Star Junction there on Tuesday in connection with the festival for the benefit of the Trotter club.

The score of yesterday's game follows:

Mount Braddock 000 000 001—1
Trotter 003 000 000—3
Batteries—Trotter, Frazier and Swope; Mount Braddock, Dunaway and Livingston.

Cincinnati fans mobbed Umpire Charley Moran the other day. Since it happened after Cincinnati went dry they can't lay it to booze selling at the Cincinnati ball park.

Kid Gleason is quoted as saying that Eddie Cicotte has everything that a pitcher should have. Other clubs will agree and add that he also has something that no pitcher should be allowed to have.

DISCARD EMBLEM

Connie Mack thinks no longer want to be known as white elephants.

They are through with the name, manager and players alike feeling that it is a jinx, hoodoo, or something that is keeping the team from winning its way out of the cellar position.

The emblematic elephant has been torn, or cut off the sleeve, of all the Athletics, and now there is a feeling of hopefulness in the Mack camp.

The first day the sign of the pachyderm was removed from their uniforms they defeated the crippled Tigers. That made the Mackmen feel sure the elephant on the sleeve was an unlucky symbol.

Splendid Work of Veteran Overlooked in Excitement Caused by Sensational Playing of Outfielder Young and Larry Doyle.

In the excitement caused by the sensational hitting and fielding of Ross Young, the timely snatching of Larry Doyle and the generally fine work of the Giant team as a whole, the results obtained by at least one member of the cast have been somewhat overlooked, says a New York critic.

The player in question is Arthur Fletcher. It was 10 long years ago that Fletcher first eased his way into a major league game, but he is still very much in the running. There are

The Magnificent Ambersons

BOOTH TARKINGTON

COPYRIGHT BY DOUGLASS PAGE & COMPANY

He was gratified to see that Eugene was surprised, if not, indeed, a little startled.

"He's what?"

"He's an expert on nitro-glycerin. Doesn't that beat the devil? Yes, sir! Young Akers told me that. This George Minner had worked like a ham-dog ever since he got started out at the works. They have a special plant for nitro-glycerin, way off from the main plant, of course—in the woods somewhere—and George Minner's been working there, and lately they put him in charge of it. He oversees shooting off walls, too, and shoots 'em himself, sometimes. They aren't allowed to carry it on the railroad, you know—have to team it. Young Akers says George rides around over the bumpy roads, sitting on as much as three hundred quarts of nitro-glycerin! My Lord! Talk about romantic tumbles! If he gets blown sky-high, some day he won't have a bigger drop when he comes down, than he's already had! Don't it beat the devil? Young Akers said he's got all the nerve there is in the world. Says he gets a fair salary, and I should think he ought to! Seems to me, I've heard the average life in that sort of work is somewhere around four years, and agents don't write any insurance at all for nitro-glycerin experts. Hardly!"

"No," said Eugene. "I suppose not."

Kinney rose to go. "Well, it's a pretty funny thing—pretty odd, I mean—and I suppose it would be passed-around-the-hat for old Fanny Minner if he blew up. Fred told me that they're living in some apartment house, and said George supports her. He was going to study law, but couldn't earn enough that way to take care of Fanny, so he gave it up. Fred's wife told him all this. Says Fanny doesn't do anything but play bridge these days. Got to playing too high for awhile and lost more than she wanted to tell George about, and borrowed a little from old Frank Bronson. Paid him back, though. Don't know how Fred's wife heard it. Women do hear the damndest things!"

"They do," Eugene agreed.

"Well, I'm off to the store," said Mr. Kinney briskly; yet he lingered. "I suppose we'll all have to club in and keep old Fanny out of the poorhouse if he does blow up. From all I hear it's usually only a question of time. They say she hasn't got anything else to depend on."

"I suppose not."

"Well—I wondered—" Kinney hesitated. "I was wondering why you hadn't thought of looking something around your works for him. You need to be such a tremendous friend of the family—I thought perhaps you—of course I know he's a queer lot—I know he's—"

"Yes, I think he is," said Eugene.

"No, I haven't anything to offer him."

"I suppose not," Kinney returned thoughtfully, as he went on. "I don't know that I would myself. Well, we'll probably see his name in the papers some day if he stays with that job!"

However, the nitro-glycerin expert of whom they spoke did not get into the papers as a consequence of being blown up, although his daily life was certainly a continuous exposure to that risk. Destiny has a constant passion for the incongruous, and it was George's lot to manipulate wholesale quantities of terrific and volatile explosives in safety, and to be laid low by an accident so commonplace and inconsequent that it was a comedy. Fate had referred for him the final insult of riding him down under the wheels of one of those juggernauts at which he had once shouted "Get a horse!" Nevertheless, Fate's ironic choice for George's undoing was not a big and swift and momentous car, such as Eugene manufactured; it was a specimen of the bustling little type that was flooding the country, the cheapest, commonest, hardest little car ever made.

The accident took place upon a Sunday morning, on a downtown cross-street, with the streets almost empty, and no reason in the world for such a thing to happen. He had gone out for his Sunday morning walk, and he was thinking of an automobile at the very moment when the little car struck him; he was thinking of a shiny diamond and a charming figure stepping into it, and of the quick gesture of a white glove toward the chauffeur, motioning him to go on. George heard a shout, but did not look up, for he could not imagine anybody's shouting at him, and he was too engrossed in the question "Was it Lucy?" He could not decide, and his lack of decision in this matter probably superinduced a lack of decision in another, more pressing vital. At the second and louder shout he did look up; and the car was almost on him; but he could not make up his mind if the charming little figure he had seen was Lucy's and he could not make up his mind whether to go backward or forward; these questions became entangled in his mind. Then, still not being able to decide which of two ways to go, he tried to go both, and the little car ran him down. It was not moving very rapidly, but it went all the way over George.

He was conscious of gigantic violence; of roaring and jolting and concussion; of choking clouds of dust, shot with lightning, about his head; he heard snapping sounds as loud as shots from a small pistol, and was stabbed by excruciating pains in his legs. Then he became aware that the machine was being lifted off of him. People were gathering in a circle round him, gubbling.

His forehead was bedewed with the sweat of anguish, and he tried to wipe off this dampness, but failed. He could not get his arm that far.

George could see above his eyes the skirts of the blue coat, covered with dust and sunshine. "Ambulance here to a minute. Now mind tryin' to move any. You want 'em to send for some special doctor?"

"No," George's lips formed the word. "Or to take you to some private hospital?"

"Wait! them to take me," he said faintly, "to the City hospital."

"A' right."

and protesting and a strident-voiced girl, his companion, supported his argument, declaring to everyone her

"It's the fella that hit you," the policeman

"You bet your life they ain't no case and stood at George's feet, addressing him heatedly: "I'm sorry for you all

"Wasn't got a step over eight miles

George's drawn eyelids twitched; on the two protesting motorists, and the old impetuous spirit within him

"I wasn't here then. What was it?"

"Biffert!"

CHAPTER XXIII.

Eugene's feeling about George had not been altered by his talk with Kinney in the club window, though he was somewhat disturbed. Kinney had represented George as a new George—at least in spots—a George who was proving that decent stuff had been hid in him; in fact, a George who was doing rather a handsome thing in taking a risky job for the sake of his aunt, poor old sissy Fanny Minner. Eugene didn't care what risks George took, or how much decent stuff he had in him; nothing that George would ever do in this world or the next could change Eugene Morgan's feeling toward him.

If Eugene had wished, he could easily have taken George out of the nitro-glycerin branch of the chemical works. Always interested in apparent impossibilities of invention, Eugene had encouraged many experiments in such groupings as those for the discovery of substitutes for gasoline and rubber; and, though his mood had withheld the information from Kinney, he had recently bought from the elder Akers a substantial quantity of stock on the condition that the chemical company should establish an experimental laboratory. He intended to buy more; Akers was anxious to please him; and a word from Eugene would have placed George almost anywhere in the chemical works. The possibility just edged itself into Eugene's mind; that is, he let it become part of his perceptions long enough for it to prove to him that it was actually a possibility. Then he half started with disgust that he should be even idly considering such a thing over his last cigar for the night, in his library. "No!" And he drew the cigar into the empty fireplace and went to bed.

His bitterness for himself might have worn away, but never his bitterness for Isabel. He took that thought to bed with him—and it was true that nothing George could do would ever change this bitterness of Eugene. Only George's mother could have changed it.

And as Eugene fell asleep that night, thinking thus bitterly of George, George in the hospital was thinking of Eugene. He thought of Eugene Morgan and of the Major; they seemed to be the same person for awhile, but he managed to disentangle them and even to understand why he had confused them. Long ago his grandfather had been the most striking figure of success in the town; "As rich as Major Amberson!" they used to say. Now it was Eugene. "If I had Eugene Morgan's money," he would hear the workmen day-dreaming at the chemical works; or, "If Eugene Morgan had hold of this place you'd see things!" And the boarders at the table d'hôte spoke of "the Morgan place" as an eighteen-century Frenchman spoke of Versailles. Like his uncle, George had perceived that the "Morgan Place" was the new Amberson mansion. His reverie went back to the paternal days of the mansion, in his boyhood, when he would gild his pony up the driveway and order the darkey stableman about, while they whooped and cheered, and his grandfather, observing from a window, would laugh and call out to him: "That's right, George. Make those larks jump!" He remembered his gay young uncles, and how the town was eager concerning everything about them, and about himself. What a clean, pretty town it had been! And in his reverie he saw like a pageant before him the magnificence of the Ambersons—their passing, and the passing of the Ambersons themselves. They had been slowly engulfed without knowing how to prevent it, and almost without knowing what was happening to them. The family lot, in the shabby old quarter, out at the cemetery, held most of them now; and the name was swept altogether from the new city. The Ambersons had passed, and the new people would pass, and the new people that came after them, and the next new ones, and the next—and the next—

He had begun to murmur, and the man on duty as night nurse for the ward came and bent over him. "Did you want something?" "There's nothing in this family business," George told him confidentially. "Even George Washington is only something in a book."

Eugene read a report of the accident in the next morning's paper. He was on the train, having just left for New York, on business, and with less leisure would probably have overlooked the obscure item:

LEGS BROKEN.

G. A. Minner, an employee of the Akers Chemical company, was run down by an automobile yesterday at the corner of Tennessee and Main and had both legs broken. Minner was to blame for the accident, according to Patrolman F. A. Kex, who witnessed the affair. The automobile was a small one driven by Herbert Cottelman of 223 Noble avenue, who stated that he was making less than four miles an hour. Minner is said to belong to a family formerly of considerable prominence in the city. He was taken to the City hospital, where physicians stated later that he was suffering from internal injuries besides the fracture of his legs, but might recover.

Eugene read the item twice, then tossed the paper upon the opposite seat of his compartment, and sat looking out of the window. His feeling toward George was changed not a jot by his human pity for George's human pain and injury. He thought of George's tall and graceful figure, and he shivered, but his bitterness was untouched. He had never blamed Isabel for the weakness which had cost them the few years of happiness they might have had together; he had put the blame all on the son, and it stayed there.

He began to think poignantly of Isabel.

How Jerusalem Wails

Wailing Wall of the Jews.

"T—E-K—E—O—T—e—k—e—o—" the notes ring out, poignant, pitiful: "T—e—k—e—o—" Once again it resounds in the hoary rifts of the "wailing wall," remnant of Hebrew glory, symbol of Hebrew fall. Piercing, clear, it heralds a mighty surge of grief. For from the gloom of a hundred souls a cry is wrung, unceasing in the smiling sunshine, writes Marian Weinstein to the Chicago Daily News. The Jews of Jerusalem have come to mourn, to pray. They have brought to their Father the sting of their newest affliction, the fresh page in their long tragedy—the slaughter of their brethren in free Galicia.

The bearded elders in their faded caftans bend and sway over their huge tomes. Their enrobed brush the yellowing leaves of prayer. Apart on the cobbled street sit shaven women, sear, fleshless, resting their quivering forms against a native hut. Their younger sisters, old-young women, press the temple rule. Now they fondle the stones and now they clutch them in despair, choking dry sobs. Beyond, a girl is weeping. She has lived through a Russian pogrom. There is a lull to the wall. For a moment the mass of motley headgear—skull caps, turbans, fezzes—ceases to sway. But only for a moment. And now the little Talmud Torah boys come from their schools, tiny replicas, with their side curls and long coats, of their elders. They file in under their rabbi's eye, a look of awe on their pale faces.

All United in Mourning. Jerusalem has forgotten its squabbles. In this hour of prayer and mourning before their Maker all Jews are brothers. "A dole, a dole," a wretched bundle of rags whimpers through the crowd. Between two sputtering candles against the wall a khaki-clad soldier from the Jewish battalion pauses to read the call to this prayer that was posted for days in the streets of the Holy City, in Hebrew and in Yiddish.

Terrible reports come to us, one after the other, from Galicia. Enemies of Israel shed Jewish blood like water. Hundreds of Jewish victims have been murdered amid all sorts of atrocities. Countless innocents, men, women and children, our people's most pious souls, have fallen in Lemberg alone 108, butchered and burned, were buried in oge graves. Scores of scrolls of the law have been destroyed, and such outrages were committed as in the day of the destruction of the temple. All our brethren in Galicia are in deadly terror.

"Our elders, therefore, have met and decided that the whole community—men, women and children—should assemble Tuesday at 8 o'clock, Arabic time, at the temple ruin to read the psalms and blow the shofar that the Lord above may take pity upon our brethren."

"Ibrahmim Ibrahmim!" A shrill cry strikes the air. From the roof of her stone hut a swarthy Arab woman calls her son, who has somehow been caught in the wailing, swaying multitude. "Ibrahmim!"

At the Wailing Place. The Jewish soldier rescues the reluctant Ibrahmim just as a score of British Tommies appear in the wake of a Moslem guide.

"Here you have the Jews' wailing wall," he recites in a sing-song. "The upper stones were built in the time of the Romans, but the lower blocks belonged to Solomon's temple. Here the Jews come every Friday to wall."

The Jewish soldier has recognized a fellow Jew in an American Red Cross doctor, standing thoughtfully at the edge of the praying crowd.

"From what part of the States are you?" he whispers eagerly. "I'm from Philly. I thought you might be, too."

Down the stony steps leading to the wailing place new figures are ever hurrying, scurrying. The Talmud Torah children are leaving with their rabbi. The weeping girl leans against the Arab hut now, her eyes half closed, her lips trembling. The old-young women still cling to the wall as if the God whose ear they seek were in its very stones.

"A dole, a dole." The beggar renews her quest.

The sun sinks lower and lower, but still they come, old and young, the Jews of Jerusalem. The praying forms never weary. Ever their cry rings above the noise of the city, a centuries old cry.

DIDN'T LET STOMACH KNOW Simple Manner in Which a Struggling Pittsburgher Acquired a Competence.

A Pittsburgh man, by thrift and economy acquired a competence from a most humble beginning, but until he related his experience to his friends in the bank where he did business they were unable to discover the real secret of his success. Here is his story, according to the Pittsburgh Dispatch: He started to work on the South side at $8 per week and was soon advanced to $10 and later to $12. When he was marked up to $14 he got married, beginning double team life in two rooms in one of the alleys right to Carson street. His boss thought so well of his marriage he added $2 more per week to his income. He bought a small lot in the alley, put up a little house and ere long was living free of rent. Then he annexed a lot, erected another house, and found himself a landlord. Another legacy of $2 a week was his good fortune, and he last followed property that enabled him to live without daily toil. "Well," said the president of the bank, "you have not told these tellers and young fellows in the bank the real secret of your success, as you confided it privately to me," and, laughing, the man said: "Oh, yes, I know what you mean. Well, boys, I told you I started at $8 per week and, believe me, no matter how often I was advanced in wages, I never let my stomach know that I was on any other than $8 weekly allowance." This explained his comfortable bank balance. Moral: Go thou and do likewise. "Own a home."

Cultured Hindus. In Bengal there are about seventy millions of people, and they boast of perhaps the best culture in India at the present time. The language is a written language is only fifty years old. Though for over a thousand years it has been a dialect, there is no Indian history unfortunately no trace of Bengal having been an important literary tongue. The language has borrowed its alphabet, grammar and vocabulary. There are numerous Persian, Arabic and English words incorporated in it, and the wonder of it is that, instead of having been degraded into some vulgar form like pidgin English, Bengali has become the most literary, scientific and perhaps the most philosophic of modern Indian languages.

Workmen Marooned High in Air. A violent windstorm recently swept across Great Salt Lake, and overland into Ogden, which it coated with a thick layer of salt. Buildings, pedestrians, sidewalks and automobiles were all "salted" impartially. The only real damage done, however, was in the destruction of a 200-foot scaffolding around a concrete grain elevator. Six unfortunate workmen, who were on top of a finished part of the elevator, 100 feet in the air, at the time of the collapse, were completely marooned until rescued with extensive ladders by the local fire department. Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Personal Illustration. The master of a Glasgow school was presiding over the reading lessons of the third standard when the child whose turn it was to read came across the word "hirdling."

"What is a hirdling?" asked the teacher. The boy thought for a moment or two, and then replied, "I don't know." The question was next propounded to the entire class, with a like result. The master then explained the meaning of the word as lucidly as he could, and, at the conclusion of his explanation, repeated the question.

"Please, sir," replied the boy addressed, "you're a hirdling; you're paid to teach us."

Dodging Shop. They struck up a conversation in the hotel lobby and finally one man suggested a trip to the movies. The other politely declined.

"Don't you want to see Viola Vampire?"

"No."

"Nor Yorick Ham in his latest comedy?"

"No."

"What's the matter, my friend? Aren't you interested in the various stars?"

"Not this evening. I'm an astronomer taking a night off."

Probably Dogfish. Plank had had a day off, and when he returned to the office the following morning his pals wanted to know why he looked so disgruntled.

"Everything went wrong," grumbled Blank.

"How was that?" one asked. "Ever go fishing with a girl?"

"Once."

"Old she protest against hurting the fish?"

"No. She said she was sure they were perfectly happy, because they were all wagging their tails."—London Tit-Bits.

WHY GOVERNMENT ROAD OWNERSHIP IS BEING OPPOSED

Reasons are Set Forth By the United States Chamber of Commerce.

POLITICS WOULD CONTROL

In the Amount and Purpose of Appropriations; Would Require a Credit of $20,000,000,000; Operation Inefficient; Expenses and Rates High.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—In reporting the result of the referendum taken on the question of government ownership of the railroads, the following statement has been issued by the United States Chamber of Commerce: "Complete returns tabulated of the referendum submitted by the Chamber of Commerce of the United States to its member organizations show that 99 per cent of the votes cast were opposed to government ownership of railroads. The national chamber is a federation of 1,120 commercial and trade organizations with a membership of 670,000 business men.

"The national chamber therefore goes on record against government ownership for the following reasons:

"First. Under government ownership the development of railroad facilities would depend upon Congressional appropriations which would prevent the anticipation of the transportation needs of the country. Appropriations would not be made in the amount and at the time needed to insure adequate development of the railroads. Political considerations might also control the amount of appropriations and the objects for which they were made.

"Second. To acquire the railroads the government would have to pledge its credit for eighteen to twenty billions of dollars, at a time when other large financing must be done. It would be difficult for the government to dispose of the securities to purchase the railroads, and it would be necessary for the government to secure from five hundred million to one billion dollars of new capital each year. If the government were to assume the burden of financing the railroads at the present time when the war debt is so large, its interest rate would necessarily be as high as, if not higher than, the rate at which corporations could secure capital.

"Third. Government operation is seldom if ever, as efficient as corporate management. Competition, the incentive to efficiency and progress in private enterprises, is absent from the government administration of affairs. Individual initiative is less, bureaucratic methods are more characteristic and the services rendered are less progressively efficient.

"Fourth. While the government would presumably select officers and employes by means of efficiency tests, political influences would almost certainly be given weight in selecting men for official positions.

"Fifth. Unless the government adopted the policy of fixing low rates and fares with the intention that any resulting deficit from operations should be placed as an increased burden of taxes upon the general public, rates and fares would be higher under government than under private operation. Under government operation expenses rise in relation to income, and the charges imposed by the government, if a deficit is to be avoided, must be higher than those which it would be necessary to permit railroad corporations to make.

"Sixth. The political effect of government ownership and operation of railroads in the United States would be serious. There are now about 500,000 civil employes of the public service of 2,000,000 railroad employes, the majority of whom are voters, would constitute a force of about 2,500,000 government employes interested in controlling the policy of the government as regards wages, hours and conditions of service. Such a body of employes might easily exercise a controlling interest upon state and national politics."

DAWSON HAS A RICH STREAK OF REAL PATRIOTISM

$4,162.50 and our War Chest fund was $8,200. As to war stamps, Dawson mentioned $25,000 worth. In regard to the Red Cross, they told us we'd have to raise $8,000. "We easily did that and more, for the Red Cross obtained $18,000. As for the work of the men in particular the work of the Red Cross ladies and the surrounding township, space will not allow us to enumerate all that was done and given. Needle work, bandages, knitting, poured out in steady stream week in and week out. The Red Cross of Dawson and township did its duty in giving comfort to the U. S. soldier boy. And there's many a lad who walked up and down on his guard of two hours in sleet and snow and zero weather, who, thanked and blessed the kind hands that wrought the warmth he had that night. As for the wounded there were piles upon piles of bandages wrapped in Dawson to help keep in that blood so valuable.

"When on Saturday her 103 boys, including the township, march in olive drab, and they proudly and silently swing along with the equally valiant and brave boys of the adjoining towns of Vanderbilt and Dickerson Run and Liberty, you may be sure, there will be many who stand there who will feel a peculiar catch at the throat and a thrill, and a desire to get in line and swing along, one-two-three-four, as we used to hear the sergeants sing. Dawson had and still has the spirit of sacrifice, the spirit to do things.

"During the war, it went ahead and did things, never giving a thought as to statistics, cost and credit for so doing. The proof? Well, just try to get them to boast here or show figures. We had to beg them. And here let me add, you must admit that Dawson ought to be a highly desirable town to live in. We admit it is. Our town folk are surely true blue Americans. And the town has some characteristics certain other towns we have been in do not possess. Dawson firmly believes in and practices the teaching of the Constitution of the United States which guarantees all of its certain rights, among which are the privilege of worshipping God according to the dictates of our conscience. Here is a place where is found as many differences in religion as are found in a large place. But there's one thing, Dawson respects and that is his neighbor's religion. Each preaches his own, each knows that the other is one of God's children. And so we have forbearance, and mutual good will; mutual respect and most of us, we what ought to be a command, 'Mine your own business.' Indeed as far as being a pleasant place to live in, there's a well known citizen who puts M. D. after his name, who holds it in the healthiest place in this region. He will give you statistics to prove that this is one of the spots the discoverer of the 'Fountain of Youth' missed and we think the former corner is right.

"At any rate, judging us by figures you will admit Dawson's enterprise and service in the war were gigantic."

Of Railroads and Merchant Marine is a Plan Now Under Consideration.

A plan whereby the railroads of the United States will be brought together with the merchant marine for the direct purpose of aiding American producers to export their goods more economically and rapidly now is a big issue which is being considered by the United States Shipping Board in cooperation with the leaders of the congressional committees on railroads and the merchant marine. The linking of the two means of transportation also will mean that established routes to every port in foreign countries will be formulated and the railroads and the merchant marine will work together under the direction of official government rules and regulations.

BATHING SUITS AND GARTERS EDGED IN FUR ARE LATEST CRAZE AT ATLANTIC CITY

Special to The Courier.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Aug. 7.—Fur trimmed bathing suits are the latest craze in this city of fashion and startling innovations.

The newest innovation was worn by the summer girl here today. Rabbit skins are used as collars and fur garters are also seen. The fur is so treated that it revives immediately in the gay sunshine after being immersed in old Neptune's domain.

Flashy bathing suits are swimming right into favor. Denizens of the deep, in brilliant coloring characteristic of fish caught in the tropics, are used effectively on black silk suits. Sometimes the suit rig is perfectly plain with the fish motif introduced on the rubber caps and stockings. One piece bathing suits will be taboored at the shore next summer. Early notice was served this week so that midday will have no excuse as to ignorance of the stern edict. This warning was given out as a guide to manufacturers of stylish bathing trammets for fair femininity.

Bare knees are also taboo. Dr. Charles L. Bowers, Chief Beach Censor, says: "We will not tolerate one piece bathing suits for women as long as I am in charge of the bathing grounds. The body must be adequately covered. The rule for the wearing of stockings by women will continue in force. I do not aim to be prudish, but we must draw the line somewhere to save appearances."

The first fur trimmed bathing suit created quite a furore here. It was worn by a prominent Philadelphia society girl on the exclusive beach directly in front of the new Hotel Ambassador, which is in the Quaker-controlled residential section of Chelsea. When this young woman made her appearance on the beach she attracted a crowd of the proletrian, much to the discomfort of the gorgeously plumed footman in front of
